Why are pastor burnout and disillusionment so common?

Is ministry meant to be more than program maintenance and people management?

Is the church today a victim of twentieth century Western culture?

How has our society restructured our methods, our ministries, and even our theology?

Why do our churches seem so powerless?

Is the power of God available to the church today?

In order to come into the liberating truths about God, we must stop asking how much we know, and start examining how we live. As James put it, "Do not merely listen to the word and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says." James 1:22
